

What is digital abuse?

A photograph of a man and a woman sitting together, looking at a smartphone. The woman is embracing the man from behind. The image has a purple tint.

You never deserve to be mistreated – online or off. It's never okay for your partner to use technology, such as texting or social media, to bully, harass, stalk, or intimidate you.

You have the right to feel comfortable and safe in your relationship. Your partner should respect your relationship boundaries, even online. If they don't, you may be experiencing digital abuse.

NATIONAL DOMESTIC VIOLENCE HOTLINE

CALL 1-800-799-SAFE (7233) | TTY 1-800-787-3224 | CHAT THEHOTLINE.ORG

Digital abuse happens when one partner uses technology to maintain power and control over another in a relationship.

You may be experiencing digital abuse if your partner:

- Tells you who you can or can't be friends with on Facebook and other sites.
- Sends you negative, insulting, or even threatening emails or social media messages.
- Uses social media or GPS on your phone to monitor you.
- Pressures you to send explicit video or text messages.
- Steals or insists on being given your passwords.
- Looks through your phone frequently to read your texts or look at your call history.

If you have concerns about what's happening in your relationship, call or chat today. We're completely free and confidential.

CALL 1-800-799-SAFE (7233) | TTY 1-800-787-3224 | CHAT THEHOTLINE.ORG

The production of this publication was supported by Grant Number 90EV0407 from the Department of Health and Human Services, Administration for Children and Families. Its contents are solely the responsibility of the National Domestic Violence Hotline and do not necessarily represent the official views of the Department of Health and Human Services, Administration for Children and Families.